Chapter 1 by Paul Duncanson

They came quickly filling the valley with warriors who were no more than children. The rugged band of men and women were surrounded they had been fighting off bands of soldiers for two weeks now. They spread out into a thin circle shoulder of man to shoulder of women, their shoulders hard like the land they lived in. Brandon Stark thought they were done this time as he looked around at there enemies. The children had hard faces maybe from the war or something else, there expressions similar to those of the faces they carved into trees.
